

On-Demand, Part II: More Lessons to Build Writers

On-Demand Part II is a workshop designed for teachers of apprentice writers. What we've seen is that, statewide, we're "stuck in apprentice" because students have difficulty in developing their thoughts. Apprentice writers may have a beginning understanding of audience and purpose but many times lack strategies for including the details which their audience needs.

This workshop is organized around the bullets of the analytical rubric, beginning with the three purposes of On-Demand writing: to narrate, to inform, and to persuade. Within those three purposes, we'll look specifically at the reading-writing connection as one strategy for helping students understand methods of idea development specific to those three purposes.

We'll also look at organizers and beginning paragraph development strategies that will help all students reach their potential in on-demand writing as well as in more authentic classroom writing. And, presenters and group members will also have a chance to share mini-lessons and classroom ideas for other bullets of the scoring rubric.

Please note that, even though we are focusing on the On-Demand assessment, we firmly believe that any teacher of writing will benefit from new ideas, more models, and, most of all, an opportunity to share ideas with other teachers in a risk-free environment.

We do expect these workshops to fill up fast, and we must limit the number of participants, depending on the size of the room. Because of the popularity of these workshops, we also must request a 48-hour notice for any cancellation of a registration. Without notice, your district will be charged for the seat which could have been filled from our waiting list.

Effective Instructional Leadership Credit (6 hours) is available for this workshop.
